how do historians make sense of the spatial layeredness of the past cyrus schayegh argues that the modern world's ultimate socio spatial feature is not the oft studied processes of globalization or state formation or urbanization but rather the fast paced mutually transformative intertwinements of cities regions states and global circuits tackling important philosophical questions on modernity what it is where it begins and when it ends przemyslaw tacik challenges the idea that modernity marks a particular epoch and historicises its conception to offer a radical critique of it his deconstruction informed critique collects and assesses reflections on modernity from major philosophers including hegel heidegger lacan arendt agamben and Žižek this analysis progresses a new understanding of modernity intrinsically connected to the growth of sovereignty as an organising principle of contemporary life he argues that it is the idea of modernity as a taken for granted era which is positioned as the essential condition for making linear history possible when it should instead be history in and of itself which dictates the existence of a particular period using hegel's notion of spirit to trace the importance of sovereignty to the conception of the modern epoch within german idealism tacik traces hegel's influence on heidegger through reference to the star in his late philosophy which represents the hope of overcoming the metaphysical poverty of modernity this line of thought reveals the necessity of a paradigm shift in our understanding of modernity that speaks to contemporary continental philosophy theories of modernity political theory and critical re assessments of the concept of history reflects on the presuppositions behind the contemporary understanding of history that often remain implicit and not spelled out it is a critique of the modern understanding of history that presents it as universal and teleological progressively moving forward to an end although few contemporary philosophers and historians maintain the view that there is strict universality and teleology in history the remnants of these positions still affect our understanding of history but if history is not universal and singular evolving toward an objective universal end it should be possible to admit of multiple histories some of which we appropriate as our own an another important aspect of this book is that it provides an account of history that is itself both historical and rooted in attempts to narrate and explain history from its inception in antiquity the book seeks to establish features or constituents of history that might be found in any historical account and might themselves be considered historical invariants in history
